P. A. R. I. S.

A Mandate by his Eminency the Cardinal de Noailles, Archbishop of Paris, ordering Prayers to be made on Occasion of the publick Calamities.

LEWS Anthony de Noailles, by divine Permission, Cardinal Priest of the holy Roman Church with the Title of Santa Maria Sopra la Minerva, Archbishop of Paris, Duke of St. Cloud, Peer of France, Commander of the Order of the Holy Ghost, Professor of the Sorbonne, and Head of the College of Navarre. To all the Faithful of our Diocese, Greeting and Benediction.

The publick Calamities which Men usually look upon as proceeding wholly from natural Causes, ought to be considered by those who hold the Faith as Decrees of the Providence of a just and merciful God, whose supreme Orders rule all Events, who exerts his Vengeance to punish Sinners, and who proves the just to purify them; And how many of these just and salutary Chastisements have we undergone of late Years, without profiting by them?

Storms, Hail, and Tempests, have ruined whole Towns and laid our Lands desolate, Fires in divers parts have reduced many Families to Beggary.

After these Warnings from Heaven which should have made us examine and amend ourselves, a new Scourge is employed to subdue our Stubbornness; Contagious Distempers are broke out in the farthest Parts of the Kingdom, and tho' by Order of the Regent all the most proper Measures and Precautions have been taken to stop the Progress of the Mortality, it is not in those Means which human Wisdom applies, that we ought to place our Confidence; it is to Prayer and Repentance we ought to have Recourse for appeasing the Anger of God, which we have drawn down upon ourselves by the Dissoluteness of our Manners.

If we are more favourably dealt with than our Brethren, let us not think ourselves therefore more righteous and more innocent.

Says ye, said Jesus Christ to the Jews, that these Galileans, who were mingled with others in one Sacrifice, were Sinners above all the Galileans, because they suffered such things? - - - Or those eighteen upon whom the Tower in Siloam fell, think ye that they were sinners above all men that dwelt in Jerusalem? I tell you Nay, continues the Saviour of the World, but except ye repent ye shall all likewise perish.

Agreeably to this Instruction of Jesus Christ, if we reflect ever so little on our Conduct and Manners, can we think our selves less criminal because God yet spares us? Can we imagine we have less Need of Repentance than those on whom the Lord is seen exercising all the Rigour of his Justice?

Faith grows weaker daily, Libertinism and Irreligion make a rapid Progress, rash and audacious Spirits blaspheming what they are ignorant of, attack openly the Foundations of Religion. The sacred Rules and Maxims of the Gospel are hardly any longer known but by a small Number of faithful Souls, Wickedness abounds, Charity is chilled, and if the Son of Man cometh, as he himself has declared he will in the latter Days, would he find Faith on the Earth?

The Authority of the Church is contemned, her Laws are no more respected, the Lord's Day is publicly profaned by mercenary Labour and unlawful Traffick, by criminal Pleasures, and shameful Debaucheries; Fasts and Abstinence observed so religiously by our Fathers are scandalously broken. Licentiousness and Corruption the fatal Fruits of Irreligion reign every where. Men give themselves up to insatiable Avarice, which God so rigorously condemns in the Holy Scriptures; Usury and Fraud are openly practiced in Defiance of divine and human Laws, as God complains by his Prophets; there is no longer any Curb strong enough to restrain Covetousness, which St. Paul describes as the Root of all Evil.

The Use of these Treasures of Iniquity is not less criminal than the Means used to acquire them, the rich Man is become insensible of the extream Miseries of his Brethren, his Heart grows harder with his Abundance, his Wealth serves only to foment and gratify his Passions. Luxury carried to the utmost Excess, has corrupted the publick Manners, over-turned all Order, confounded all Ranks and Conditions, and stifled all Notions of Duty and Decency. Vice once emboldened and supported by the Multitude, triumphs openly with an audacious Face; Integrity, Probity, Candour, are deemed the Qualities of a mean Spirit; Men are ashamed to preserve any little Remains of Virtue, and apt to be dissolute enough.

When we have so many Disorders before our Eyes, ought we to wonder that God who is just, holy, and almighty, extends his Arm to punish this Deluge of Wickedness which overspreads the Earth? Does not our present Condition recall to our Minds the Times of the Prophets, and do we not deserve the same Reproaches which God used to Jerusalem, over the fairest City, because a Prostitute abandoned to all the Depravations of her Heart! It is in vain that I have chastised thee, sub God, by the Mouth of Isaiah, I redouble my Blows, and yet multiply your Offences, there is no sound Part upon which I can strike, nothing but Wounds and Bruises, not one for me to lay with Ointment.

Will the People who's Millions of all the Divisions, or content with groaning for them at the Foot of the Altar, shall he be a dumb Spectator of the Iniquities of the People committed to his Charge, and for whom he is to answer Soul for Soul? Does not God himself command us to lift up our Voice to call upon Sinners to bethink themselves, to animate the Pervour of the just, to excite all Men to pacify the Wrath of Heaven by worthy Fruits of Repentance?

We know there are in this great City many poor Souls, who lament continually the Deprivations from which God has preferred them; those pure Souls, consecrated to the Lord, who join holily an innocent Life to penitential Exercises, are the Prop of the World, the Returns of the Church, and the Consolation of the Pastor. We cannot therefore too much exhort them to redouble their Zeal, their Tears, their Mortifications, and their Prayers.

The Holy Ghost often represents to us what Force and Efficacy the Prayer of the just has, the Lord says himself that at the Time he is most justly provoked against his People, he seeks only a faithful Soul to raise Barriers sufficient to stop his Fury and avert his Vengeance, and complains of not finding one, qui sicut quis suspensus super te non ruitur. Ezech. Ch. 22. V. 30. I sought for a Man among them that should make up the hedge, and stand in the Gap before me, for the Lord, that I should not destroy it; but I found none. Let Men now add this Reproof, by the Pervour of their Prayers affected with the Calamities of the People, who themselves up as Victims of Propitiation, for reconciling Heaven to Earth.

Moved by this Spirit of Zeal and Charity, we conjure you to lift up your Hands to Heaven, and to implore the Protection of God upon this great Kingdom and People, who have always professed a sincere Adherence to the Faith of their Fathers, and the true Worship which God requires.

Cease not to pray that the Sword of the Lord may stop, and cut off no more of our Brethren, and that the Stroke with which we are threatened may not reach us.

Let the Preservation, which is so valuable, of the King whom God has given us, be the great Object of your Prayers and of your Desires, beg that his Reign may be as long and as gloriatus as that of his august Great Grandfather; that he may be no less the Heir of the Faith and Virtues of St. Lewis, than the Successor of his Crown.

Pray likewise with Ardour that the great Prince, in whose Hands the Royal Authority is deposited, may be endowed with fulness of Wisdom, and all the Virtues necessary for governing worthily the Kingdom intrusted to his Care; that he may be equally the Protector of Religion and the Defender of the State; that he may settle firmly and maintain the Peace of the Church, which was always the Object of his Wishes, and is the Fruit of his Care and Labours; and that he may make no other use of the Authority which is in his Hands, than for rendering according to his own Desires the People Happy, establishing the Reign of Justice, promoting the Worship of God, and causing his Laws to be duly respected.
